November 14, 2008

MacroMarkets and NYSE Arca announced that MacroShares $100 Oil Up (NYSE: UOY) and MacroShares $100 Oil Down (NYSE: DOY) begin trading today on NYSE Arca.

"We are pleased to welcome the MacroShares Up and Down $100 Oil Trusts to NYSE Arca," said Lisa Dallmer, SVP, Global Exchange Traded Products and Indexes, NYSE Euronext. "MacroMarkets, the first issuer of Paired Trust Securities, is an innovator, and we look forward to listing more MacroShares developed by MacroMarkets that will give investors the opportunity to track important sectors of the economy."

UOY and DOY are securities designed to allow investment in either the upward or inverse price change in oil prices as measured by Crude Oil Futures. The securities are designed to have a five-year term, have no credit or counterparty risk and are fully collateralized by U.S Treasuries bills and cash.

MacroMarkets, the firm pioneering these innovative products, has also filed with the SEC for MacroShares Major Metro Housing, benchmarked to the S&P/Case Shiller Composite-10 index (ticker: UMM) (ticker: DMM) and MacroShares Medical Inflation, benchmarked to the medical inflation component of CPI (ticker: UPM) (ticker: DNM).

UOY and DOY were launched on July 1, 2008. Between the launch and the close of business yesterday, the price of DOY has increased by over 120%, significantly outperforming most of the market.
